H. L. WHITE, Trustee.

ber of the Pastor Brown's church, the husband was not, and for some time past had not been on speaking terms with the pastor. He met Rev. Brown and shook hands with him and stated that he was sorry that any difference had existed between them and that he intended to join the church and be a good member.

He also said that his home life was not happy and that he was going to Omaha. He returned to his home and the minister saw him standing in the kitchen doorway. He also saw Mrs. Johnson in the kitchen. As he and his wife returned to the front of his house, they heard a shot and Mrs. Johnson said that she believed that Johnson had shot his wife. They ran to the Johnson home and tried to enter the back door but found it locked. They then returned toward the front and found the door open. Mrs. Johnson said to the minister, "Tell him he shot me and send for my daughter Marie." The "him" she was supposed to have meant was the man whom Johnson accused of being the cause of the breaking up of his home.

The minister tried the front door and also found it locked. When the auto-patrol arrived a few minutes later, Officers Hearn and Swanson were compelled to remove a screened window of the bedroom on the west side of the house. Entering, they found Johnson on the floor in a pool of blood which had flowed from his breast and throat. An automatic revolver, a bloody penknife and razor told the story. Four empty shells were on the dining room floor, a pint bottle, half full of whiskey, was on the dresser and a broken whiskey glass was picked up from the floor near the body of the chief. Blood spots were found on the couch, on a newspaper that lay on the table, on the kitchen floor and the bedroom.

It appeared that the negro, after having shot his wife, had locked the front and back doors and then had tried to finish the job by shooting himself. The shot, however, failed to do the work and then he tried to cut his throat with the penknife. This failing, it is the belief of the officers, who investigated the affair, that he staggered in to the bedroom, secured the razor from the bureau drawer and then almost completely severed his windpipe. He was unconscious when the police reached him.

Mrs. Johnson was taken to the hospital in the auto-patrol which returned immediately and took the husband to the same place.

The Johnsons were married about four years ago in Pocatello, Idaho. This was the second marriage of Mrs. Johnson, whose first husband was Joseph Bell. She was apparently an excellent housewife, as everything in the house was clean and tidy.

Sheriff DeVine found two bottles of morphine and a set of needles in a drawer of the bureau, but it is not known whether either the man or woman was addicted to the use of the drug.

MIKE RITCHIE SUES

RAILROADS FOR DAMAGES

In Judge N. J. Harris' division of the district court today the damage suit of Mike Ritchie against the Oregon Short Line and Southern Pacific companies was taken up for trial and the following jury empaneled: Ambrose Hill, Albert Allen, Moroni Brown, W. O. Johnson, William L. Manning, John Neuteboom, George H. Welch and Herbert Neuteman.

The suit was instituted to recover $1500 for alleged personal injuries sustained by the plaintiff while in the employ of the companies in December, 1912. This case, it is stated, that while he was clearing a small hole in a piece of machinery, the machinery was suddenly started and the end of his forefinger was cut off.

The defendants claim that the injury was the result of carelessness on the part of the plaintiff.

SAYS HER HUSBAND

THREATENED TO KILL HER

Mrs. Rebecca Smith Williams, formerly Mrs. A. R. C. Smith, of North Ogden, has commenced divorce proceedings in the district court against Peter C. Williams, alleging cruelty and intoxication as grounds for separation.

The petition relates that the parties were married at Farmington, August 11, 1911, and that at different times since that date the defendant has become intoxicated. The plaintiff also avers that upon information and belief, the defendant is a user of cocaine and other drugs. She further states that on November 6 the defendant assaulted her with a revolver and threatened to kill her.

The plaintiff asks for divorce, restoration of her former name, Rebecca Smith, and general relief. Mrs. Smith also seeks a restraining order from the court to prevent Williams from coming to her home, as she is fearful that he will carry out his threats to kill her.

In the divorce case of Mae Willis against John G. Willis, a final decree has been issued. The interlocutory decree was issued May 15, 1913.

HOLDUP WITNESSED BY A PASSER-BY ON LINCOLN

Wilford Ryerson, who resides at 386 Thirty-fourth street said yesterday that he witnessed an extremely bold holdup, which occurred near Thirtieth street on Lincoln avenue, on Saturday night. He says that when he passed the corner he noticed two men standing near the fence and two more standing on the outer edge of the sidewalk. The two near the fence were scuffling and he thought it was just a friendly row over a bottle of whiskey.

He had not gone far, however, when he heard a loud curse from one of the men and the other ran toward him. Becoming aware of trouble, Ryerson started to run also but the man caught up with him and breathlessly asked why, having seen him being held up he did not come to his help. He told the victim that he had no idea of what had really been the reason for the scuffle and asked him why he had not called for help.

The holdup evidently had not been reported to the police department for when questioned the officers knew nothing about it.
